ROTTENNESS AMONG OFFICIALS.

where the money went.

Deluded victims, how that they know that Squiers borrowed money of Edmonds at ten per cent, to pay them their six per cent, interest, are divided in their minds with their own stupidity and how squiers could have stood it so long. Curiosity to know what the army and may officers paid Squiers on the advances he made to them for the moment diverts the attention of his victims from their own midortunes.

Department clerks were among Squiers's customers. Some of their were victims of the magnificent Levis's invisible oil speculations. Safaries cashed in advance afforded the means in some instances for getting a share in the fabilious profits promised by Levis. The failing banks, the magnifient Levis, with his invisible oil, were all in the same atmosphere as the depredating officials, and it was only Burnside, so far as is yet known, who sole out and out the Burnside's second arrest for robbing the confingent fund of the General posicilies is full of interesting suggestions, occurring, as it did, at the instant of the acrest of a number of other officials for robots. State Department.

Some time ago an impertinent detective gave the warning, and was told to mind his own business and the Government would do the tame. Later the detective offered to prove that fraud had been committed and by whom. Agam he was rebuffed. He said, "Give me twenty-four hours of access to certain places without interference and I will either convince you or confess my mistake." In less than half the time Secretary Chandler was convinced and arrests were made. The particular stealing was not a recent transaction, and some of the thieves are still in office. What is suggestive is that the department when first warned made an examination at the precise spot where it was said the studing was done, and then went to sleep over the report that it was a false alarm, and that everything was right.

Chronic disbelief that anything can be wrong, and a settled conviction that everything

The arrest of Burnside was for stealing from the Post-Office Department contingent fund, of which he had the fingering. He state forty-odd thousand dollars cash drawn from the Treasury to pay employés. As custodian he state mere than as much more from the contingent fund in different sums and at various times. His accounts as disbursing clerk were never aquared and seldom looked into, and no thought was taken about what he might be up to with his fingers in the contingent fund. Further returns are awaited.

To-day we have the proof of frands on the contingent fund in two departments and irregularities in another. It is not only a perfectly proper question, "How is it with the contingent fund of other departments?" but present developments render it unavoidable.

When Postmaster-General Gresham's attention was first drawn to Burnside's spec-ulations with Levis, he asked him, "How can you speculate on your salary?" Burn-side fixed a ready he in his mouth, "I have private means and so has my wife." The question, How can clerks hive beyond their salaries and acquire property continually? is so old that it has become almost meaningless. It is not a single case. There are hundreds of them. Possibly recent experience may give the question something like its proper force.

It is the small timbers which first give way. The parting of the fibres is a sure sign of the cable's rottenness. A ship, rated stanneh and sound, lately developed a leak. In searching for it a worm-caten plant was found. In repairing that the ship itself was found to be unseaworthy, so stealthily had the insidious worms eaten o stealthily had the insidious worms cate into the planks.

THE COVERING-UP POLICY. The departments are worked on the settled policy of letting no unpleasant fact known. It is a fixed rule to turn a deaf earlto warnings. Only recently a Treasury official in a responsible position was perafter his flagrantiy fraudolant practices and other offences, extending through a number of years, became known. Simple justice would have sent him to the periodic would have sent him to the periodic torun for the Legislature of Pennsylvania, where he is a shighing light in his party. A prominent official, newly coming to his pessilion, requested an old official of tried integrity and long experience to furnish a statement of what needed correction. So had was the shades, so explicit were the stances, so exact were all the circumstances, so exact were all the circumstances, so exact were all the circumstances.

of wat was intended. "It will never contend to a make this exposure; these things must be covered up." was the reply, after a corsultation, and there it stopped. Covering up is the policy. It is only what cannot be covered up that is known. And so will it continue to be until the Government masses into hands that will not cover up, into the covered up, in the covere of the cove Er-Senator Pool, of North Carolina, says the Democratic ticket will sweep the coun-try is that of Harrison in 1840; that it can-

GONE TO THE BOTTOM.

The schooner an account of the loss of which, off Sea Island City, was published in yesterday's Dispatch, was the Deborah II. Diverty (net "Deborah Diverdy"), which salted from Richmond on the 17th of last June. Her cargo consisted of 504 tons of cannel coal, shipped by Gervas Storrs, of this city, and her destination was Albany, N Y. She had made numerous trips to and from this port, and Captain Williams was well known and highly esteemed by shippers here and Captain Williams was well known and highly esteemed by shippers here and others with whom he had business or social relations. The true story of the loss of the Diverty will probably never be told, as nothing has ever been heard from those on board, and it is a foregone conclusion that all, including Captain Williams, his wife, and two tons, and also the wife of one of the sons, went down with the ill-fated vessel.

The schooner D. S. Ingraham, Captain Holbrook, which sailed from here some time after the Diverty for Boston, was also wrecked, probably in the some storm in which the Diverty went to the bottom. The Ingraham had a cargo of 500 tons of soft coal, shipped by the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Company. Her provinces Ohie Railway Company. Her crew were
